

Free prescriptions for patients with cancer diagnosis

Information for patients

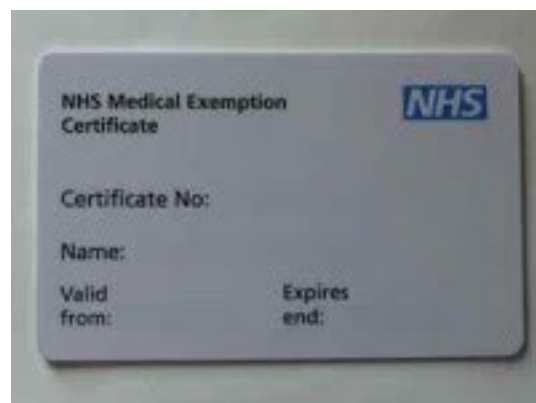

Are all patients with a cancer diagnosis entitled to free prescriptions?

Patients who are entitled to NHS treatment, and:

- undergoing treatment for cancer, or
- experiencing the effects of cancer, or
- experiencing the effects of treatment for cancer

are entitled to free NHS prescriptions via a medical exemption certificate.

If you are over 60, you do not need to apply, as you are already exempt from prescription charges.

How do I get the exemption certificate?

You can get an application form called a FP92A from your GP surgery or oncology clinic. Your doctor will sign it, and it must be returned to the address on the application form.

How long does the certificate last? And, what does it cover?

The certificate is valid for five years and covers all NHS prescriptions (whether or not they are for conditions related to your cancer). You do not have to return the certificate during this time, even if your condition changes.

How long will it take to arrive? What do I do about prescription charges in the meantime?

Once the application is received, your certificate should be issued within seven to 10 days. If you need to get a prescription before the certificate arrives, ask the pharmacy for an NHS receipt (FP57) and a refund claim form. Once the certificate arrives, take the claim form, certificate, and receipts to the pharmacy to claim your refund.
