

Discharge advice following a vulval biopsy

Information for patients

You have been given this advice sheet as you have had a biopsy (a small piece of tissue) taken from your vulval area.

When will I receive my results?

The biopsy will be sent to the pathology laboratory for close examination. Your doctor will write to you when your results are available.

How will I feel after my biopsy?

Because the vulva is such a sensitive area, you may need to take regular painkillers, such as paracetamol, for a few days following your biopsy.

Will I have to return to hospital to have my stitches removed?

Any stitches used will be dissolvable (they do not need to be removed). It usually takes between one to two weeks for stitches to dissolve, but may take as long as six to eight weeks. The doctor or nurse will advise you as to which stitches you have had before you leave hospital.

How do I keep my wound clean?

Bathing once or twice a day will help keep the area clean and promote healing, as well as being of comfort to you.

Avoid the use of bubble bath or perfumed soaps for a few days as these may cause irritation to the area that was biopsied.

When can I have sex?

You can have sex again once the area is completely healed. This is usually after about a week or so, or when you feel comfortable to do so.
